LATEST NEWS BY TELEGRAPH. WAR IN EUROPE!

[Special to the N. Y. Herald.]

LONDON, Nov. 17.

At a Cabinet Council yesterday, it was resolved to act decisively in regard to Russian complications. War is imminent. Great and popular indignation exists against Russia.

COLOGNE, Nov. 17.

The Gazette of the 15th says, after an interview with the Russian Minister at Vienna, Baron von Bunsen, that Russia had 100,000 troops on the Turkish frontier, and that Austria was fully prepared to take the field if England would give her consent.

The Great Grimsby England Steamer Hausa, and Leipzig from New York and Baltimore for Bremen, were captured by a French man-of-war. Particulars wanting.

LONDON, Nov. 17.

Intense excitement in government circles relative to threatened complications growing out of the Russian attempt to secure a revision of the treaty of Paris. The general conviction is that English statesmanship is at fault. The country is wholly unprepared for war.

The Secretary of War is hastening the arming of the nation.

Reconstructions are declining.

All the great powers are ready to reconsider the Paris treaty.

Granville replying to Gortschakoff's circular, denounces the right of Russia to recognize the European situation as releasing her from the solemn treaty stipulations.

The Eastern question is eagerly watched here.

LYONS, Nov. 17.

From New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.

The World's special from London says: Peace is desired at any price. The party in the Cabinet find themselves unable to resist the popular demand for war against Russia unless she abandoned her present position. Granville told Gladstone that they must choose between going with the tide or out of office for the moment, as they have yielded. The Members who oppose the position assumed by Granville in his reply to Gortschakoff are Leve, Childers, Cardwell, Bruce and Ayrton. The truth is, Granville sent his reply in hot haste, without consulting his colleagues, and then informed them that the country was committed to his position and he could and would not recede.

The Morning Post says, editorially, that the cause of France has now become the cause of Europe. All neutral States are bound to assist her to obtain a peace and leave her intact, or aid her to continue war, in order to hold Prussia engaged while England, Austria, Italy and Turkey whip Austria into submission. Prussia must choose between a peace and a preliminary war, or a declaration of war, which will once more prove herself the Standard has a bitter attack upon Russia and Prussia, who, it says, conspired to commit

WAR IN EUROPE!

LONDON, Nov. 17.

Dispatches from Tours state that England, with the approval of the Provisional Government, has renewed her proposals for an armistice, based upon a preliminary war compensation, razing of the frontier fortress, and the nationalization of Alsace and Lorraine. The great powers guarantee the fulfillment of these conditions by any future French government, a Congress is to assemble to settle these questions, and also to deliberate upon the East European question.

Dispatches from Vienna state that the American policy is supposed to be in favor of Russia on the Eastern question, and that Austria has sent a firm reply to St. Petersburg and also to Berlin.

The Designs of Russia.

Some time ago the report came to us from Europe that Russia was preparing to take part in the present war. It was at once assumed in some quarters that she would inevitably fight for France. We pointed out then that the true ally of Russia, in the state of affairs which we now witness in Europe, was Prussia—and we called the attention of our readers to the fact that the Czar had been from the first rather ostentatious in his efforts to keep good terms with Germany. He has sent messages of congratulation to the Queen of Prussia after important victories, and has given decorations to several German Princes. We now hear something more definite about his plans. The time has come when it is believed at St. Petersburg that designs can be thrown aside. It is said that Russia has torn up the treaty of Paris of 1856. This would render the Black Sea once more a Russian lake, and remove a restriction which must have been not a little vexatious and humiliating to the Czar.

We have little doubt that when all the secrets of this eventful year come to be unfolded, it will be found that Russia has had a secret treaty with Prussia from the outset of the war. Bismarck has a genius for making engagements of this kind. There can be no question that he obtained the promise of Napoleon not to interfere in the Austrian campaign, and Napoleon did not receive the expected "consideration" afterward, but that did not make much difference to him. Bismarck has probably intended to fulfill his pledges to Russia, whatever they may be. Hence it has been quite clear for months past that King William and the Emperor Alexander were acting in concert.

It is very difficult to conjecture how far the present plans of the Czar extend. Does he want to make another dash at the "sick man"? If so, nothing stands in his way. The old alliance which was so fatal to his father, the Emperor Nicholas, is now dissolved. France must be powerless for aggression against Russia. It is in the last degree improbable that England will ever take up arms again in defense of Turkey. Russia will therefore find no third Power between her and Constantinople. The theory of many years standing is that England's policy in India is threatened by the Eastern policy of Russia. But this idea has never stood the test of examination. The mountains of Afghanistan are an impassable barrier to Russian advances, and the people of India themselves would be little disposed to change a foreign rule to which they have become accustomed, for one which they only know through the medium of unfavorable reports. Russia would never find the native population of India willing to fight.

The Czar is probably determined to get rid of the penalties imposed upon his country through the failure of his father in the Crimean War, and all other aims he may be content to hold in reserve. It is the usual fate of all such treaties as that of 1856. The power which is tied down is submissive only while it cannot put forth the strength necessary to burst its bonds. Thus it will be with any treaty imposed upon France after the termination of the present war. Some day or other a new treaty will be made, and the Czar will even take the trouble to enter a protest against any course the Czar and his advisers may choose to adopt.

New York Times.

A Mormon of Salt Lake City

has invented a novel apparatus for killing grasshoppers by steam. The machine is very small, and can be attached to the waist of the operator, who stands upon the grasshoppers with the steam, which is ejected from a flexible tube attached to the generator.

A Chicago boy being asked if he had a mother, said he didn't know, as he hadn't been home since morning, and when he left his father and mother were quarrelling, with odds in favor of his father, as he had the hatchet in his hand.

Whatever else the French may lack, they ought not to want food; for haven't they a provisional government?

In a New England court recently a "bummer" was defined as a man who will not pay his taxes, and stands on the sidewalk and spits.
